"OUR OVERPOWERING LOVE
BLINDED US TO LAWS"

Los Angeles.—Can convention be defied in the name of love?

Will it suffice to say, "Our overpowering love blinded us to the laws of God and man"?

The age-old questions are being asked all over again by a heavy-eyed, sleep-forsaken girl, who seeks to answer both.

Sitting in her cell in the city jail, Miss Georgia Church, a college girl, firmly declared she will stand by Eldred W. Newton, a married man, accused of having contributed to her delinquency.

"He whispered words of love to me," she moaned, "until I was persuaded to go to the rooms with him where we were arrested. I did love him so dearly that I did not need much persuasion."

In his quarters in another part of the jail the man declined to discuss the case except to say that he would stick to the frail young woman and protect her to the extent of his ability.

The romance that was shattered when the police broke into the room commenced when both young people were students at college. There was a lover's quarrel. They separated. The man began paying attentions to another girl whom he soon married.

The marriage was an unhappy one, according to Miss Church, and the couple soon separated.

"I do not blame him for our arrest," the girl said. "I am equally to blame. He has not been happy with his wife. They have not been living together for some time. He promised to get a divorce from her and then we were to be married.

"I know he will keep his promise. Eldred is a good man. Our overpowering love blinded us to the laws of God and man. I will wait until Eldred gets his divorce and then we will be married."

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

A piece of burlap will be found invaluable for "rubbing up" the kitchen range. Wring it from water and wipe the range quickly. Even if the surface is hot the hands will not be burned.

A shoe that is uncomfortable from pinching may be fixed by laying a cloth wet with hot water across the place where it pinches the foot. Change the cloth as it cools. Try it.

A cure for damp, moist hands is four ounces of cologne water and one-half ounce of tincture of belladonna. Rub the hands with this several times a day.

Brown bread spread with butter in which a liberal amount of paprika has been beaten makes a delicious sandwich to serve with crisp salad.
